Ampère Wines | Pine Mountain - Cloverdale Peak

His father was an attorney in Saigon in the early 1960's who foresaw the tumultuous events that were in store for his country. Along with his wife, the couple moved to Lyon, France to provide a peaceful environment for their family. After some time, they moved back to Vietnam, only returning to France to visit their children and relatives.

That is the story of Hien Nguyen's father, Vinh Van Nguyen. The son, Hien Nguyen, and his siblings attended a high-caliber secondary school in Lyon named Ampère. There, the young student experienced traditional French cooking and was offered a choice of beverage at the meal, water or wine.

From that point on, Hien Nguyen admits he cradled a fascination for wine that he has recently turned into a passion with the advent of Ampère Wines.

Before we get into Ampère Wines, let's learn more of Hien Nguyen's unqualified success both in the educational world and also in terms of his business accomplishment.

After Ampère, Nguyen graduated from Paris' Ecole Polytechnique and soon thereafter he traveled to the United States to study for his masters in mathematics at MIT. That was in 1972 and three years later, he moved to the University of Montana where he taught mathematics. Later, he founded a software development company that further expanded his business expertise.

His infatuation with wine continued and soon after the turn of the century, he happened upon a parcel of hilly terrain that changed his entire life.

"I was actually looking for some property as a recreational spot," recalled Hien Nguyen, now an incredibly active 68-year-old. "I wanted something near the ocean and in the mountains and I eventually stumbled on Pine Mountain in Northern California. It was lovely and exactly what I was looking for. And, it already had a planted vineyard."

Nguyen's long-term interest in wine and his budding business expertise made Pine Mountain Vineyards an extraordinary opportunity for the former college professor. He set about creating a winery vehicle that could showcase the exceptional fruit that he was told was of remarkable quality.

The new vineyard owner promptly hired one of the most celebrated California winemakers, Thomas

Rivers Brown, to create the wines of Ampère Wines. What happened next could be the material for a Hollywood movie, a thoroughly romantic one.

Ampère Wines' initial release of around 300 cases was met with incredible critical acclaim and the new winery was off to a running start. It has continued to receive high marks and has developed a passionate following in the ensuing years. Production has remained on the boutique-ish side of between 400 and 500 cases, but should increase in the future.

Hien Nguyen is also keenly interested in developing additional high altitude vineyards on his property. Several blocks of different clones are already in their second year and will produce usable fruit in the near future.

Part of this interest stems from the recently awarded (in November 2011) Pine Mountain-Cloverdale Peak AVA, considered one of the smallest area, highest altitude appellations in California. For the record, the new AVA is at the extreme northern end of Sonoma's Alexander Valley AVA and actually touches the southern end of the Mendocino AVA to the west. It has been compared favorably to Bordeaux in terms of climate, temperature and light and has seen industry giants Jackson Family Vineyards and Francis Ford Coppola Vineyards begin development of estate vineyards of their own.

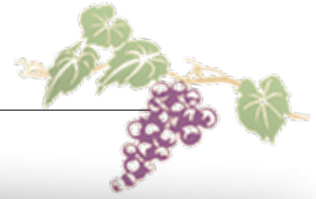

"I believe the future of my company, Ampère Wines, lies in the development of these high altitude vineyards," added Nguyen. "I have planted several Cabernet Sauvignon clones at 2,600-foot elevations, several hundred feet higher than my present vineyards. If these vines mature as Thomas (Rivers Brown) and I expect, the resulting fruit and wines will take Ampère Wines to the next level."

Considering the fact that the tiny Pine Mountain-Cloverdale Peak AVA already houses some twenty winegrowers and wineries, such elevated anticipations are definitely within the realm of possibility.

The fact that Ampère Wines and Pine Mountain Vineyards are already highly successful operations leads one to believe that the attainment of higher goals will definitely occur. It is our pleasure to introduce this winery to our Platinum Wine Club members. Enjoy!

Ampère Wines | 2012 'High Elevation' Cabernet Sauvignon

93 POINTS
— Antonio Galloni's Vinous

590 cases produced

As Antonio Galloni so aptly puts it, "Cloverdale Peak isn't exactly the first place that comes to mind for top flight Cabernet Sauvignon, but here, in these high altitude mountain vineyards in Mendocino, planted at about 2,600 feet above sea level, proprietor Hien Nguyen and winemaker Thomas Rivers Brown are on to something special." The Ampère 2012 'High Elevation' Cabernet Sauvignon is from Hien's Pine Mountain Vineyards and is a gorgeous example of this region's and property's potential. Racy and voluptuous in style, this Cabernet Sauvignon offers notes of dark red cherry, plum, smoke, menthol, and spice, with soft tannins that linger on the finish. Aged in oak. 100% Cabernet Sauvignon. Enjoy now until 2022.
