SAN SIMEON

2013 Stormwatch Estate Reserve

Central Coast, Paso Robles, CA

The residents of Southern California and greater Los Angeles in particular, may be well acquainted with the historic San Antonio Winery that is owned by the Riboli (pronounced Ree-bow-lee) Family. The beautiful winery is located within close proximity to landmark Dodgers Stadium. The Riboli family wine domain covers a wide array of wines and wineries, among them the venerable San Antonio Winery that first produced wine in 1917, San Simeon (Central Coast), Maddalena, and Riboli Family Wine Estates of Napa Valley.

Anthony Riboli is the fourth generation of his family to carry on the duties as operational mainstay of the dynasty's operation. Riboli holds a masters degree in enology from the revered University of California Davis, and has now been involved in the wine business for almost twenty years. Anthony Riboli has worked with the Riboli Family Vineyard since 1997 and has since overseen major innovations in the vineyard and winery, always working toward his foremost goal of consistently improving the quality of Riboli's family wines.

The Riboli family has recently opened a new state of the art, energy efficient winery in Paso Robles. The winery is designed for crafting premium wines using sustainable techniques that conserve energy and water and reduce waste. The new location will serve as the production home for all brands under the family's broad winery portfolio, including the wines for Riboli Family Wine Estates. Anthony Riboli states that the future of his family's business can be found in its history, and the actual spirit of togetherness his family has demonstrated over the past ten decades of its existence. "Our family remains to this day an extremely tight unit," Riboli explained. "There exists a commitment on each of our parts to see that we accomplish what we set out to do."
